The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is one of the fastest-growing religious cults in the world. Also known as Mormons, there are two main branches and several sub-groups. The main body (though not the "original" body) has their headquarters in Salt Lake City, Utah, and the primary sub-division, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (renamed Community of Christ in April 2001), has its headquarters in Independence, Missouri.

According to a news release from the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA dated 13 Feb 2002, the main LDS church was the fifth largest religious body in the United States in 2002.

Mormon Church Apologizes for Utah Massacre

CEDAR CITY, Utah, Sept. 12 (UPI) --

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints apologized this week for a massacre conducted by church members 150 years ago in southwestern Utah.

A statement read by Elder Henry B. Eyring blamed local church leaders at the time for the massacre of 120 immigrants on Sept. 11, 1857, the Deseret Morning News said Wednesday.

"We express profound regret for the massacre carried out in this valley 150 years ago today, and for the undue and untold suffering experienced by the victims then and by their relatives to the present time," Eyring said Tuesday.

The historical massacre came after a four-day standoff between the group of Arkansas immigrants and local Mormons.

The statement also recognized the blame unjustly laid upon the Paiute tribe of American Indians for the massacre, the newspaper said.

"A separate expression of regret is owed the Paiute people, who have unjustly borne for too long the principal blame for what occurred during the massacre," Eyring said. "Although the extent of their involvement is disputed, it is believed they would not have participated without the direction and stimulus provided by local church leaders and members."

... as a sidenote to the news report above, it's a little bit more than ironic that the Mormon church releases such a news report, immediately following the release of the movie: "September Dawn", a hollywood style production movie that brings to the public consciousness on a larger scale outside the history books, concerning the "mountain meadow massacres". What? couldn't the Mormon church have releases such a statement ages ago? It took them 150 years to bring this statement forward? Or are they just worried about bad press their church will get, and this release is damage control?
